

Yasmin HASHEM
Media, Events & Information | 2008- Present

Yasmin worked as project assistant of the ICCROM-ATHAR Programme at ICCROM since 2008. As a product of a multilingual and bicultural home environment (Italian / Jordanian), as well as international schooling, her background is what originally spurred her interest in socio-political affairs, especially in those issues that concern ethnicity, conflict studies and international security, human rights and international law.

She holds a BA in Politics and Sociology from the University of York, a PG Diploma in International Relations from the University of Warwick and an MA in Human Rights from Kingston University, London. Her last dissertation was on: “Islam and Human rights: The Path towards Reconciliation.” Yasmin Hashem has been involved in serving as a volunteer of St. John’s Ambulance, for the "Le Bollicine" Down Syndrome theatre group and Bengt- Reach Out organisation that sponsors projects and fund raisers for victims of war and disasters. She also wrote art history articles for NUR, an Arabic newspaper in Rome. She has also worked as research assistant for Peace Brigades International (PBI).
